

From: LBier49@aol.com@inetgw
Date: 11/8/01 2:47am
Subject: (no subject)

Ashcroft and Associates,

At least MS admits it is soft. Shame on you.

The worst monopolist since the era of the trusts and you cave.

And that assessment is not from some neophyte, but from a JD-MBA, Rutgers Class of 1975, who has been practicing for 26 years. Again, shame.

While Penfield may have shown unusual commentary form, most of what he said was accurate. Bad taste. Bad appearing. Sure. But was it the worst taste or conduct with a federal judge? Come on. In the real world many federal judges run rough shod over parties. However, that is another issue.

Windows is flawed as are all operating systems by their nature. That is why MS is periodically coming out with new operating systems. But when they integrate their products and exclude competing products without legitimate business reasons, they are using their monopoly power.

I guess we are going to have to leave it to the State's Attorney General and the Europeans.

Politics, and I mean by that the Bush administration, has sided with the monopolists and their cronies and against the American people. I can only hope that the American people will make you and your cronies pay politically. I know MS is paying you a lot. How much did the company "contribute" to your political bedfellows and causes? SHAME, SHAME, SHAME

CC: Microsoft ATR,ag@state.ca.us@inetgw,oag@state.tx.u...