This is just my personal opinion, but I find it upsetting that the states and the Federal Government's Justice Division can sue a company for being successful.

To win, to succeed, to have a good product, to overcome competition, and to make money is what business is all about. By very definition of the word "business" this means a group of people joined together to present a product or service for the intention of making money.

Placing restrictions on Microsoft operations is anti business and unamerican.
