To whom it may concern,

It has been clear for years that Microsoft's practices are detrimental in many ways to the American spirit of innovation and fair business practice.

Microsoft has repeatedly acted against smaller scale software developers' right to develop innovative and useful alternatives to their problematic Windows system or even to exist..

I urge you to continue to take strong positions in the Microsoft case, to send the message that such monopolies are un-American in every regard and will not be tolerated.

Free enterprise rests on high moral behaviors whether voluntary or upheld by our legal system.

Respectfully,

E Clark
