In my opinion Microsoft has probably done more for the Computer Software part of our economy than any other company.

Netscape even gave their browser software away for free to any educational institute or any student (about 90% free at the time), long before Microsoft got into the browser business. Now Netscape is complaining foul because Microsoft did the same except it was free to everyone (100%)

Why not let Microsoft get back to business without all these suits as a hindrance so they can help our economy to recover...
